

Music in a Lifetime

A resource for inquiring learners

Music Director
Dan Warren

Is there a musical life for me after high school?

What place might I have in Canada's professional and amateur musical communities?

What are my options for keeping music in my life?

The Wellington Wind Symphony has a story to share with you: a story that might help you answer these big questions. We invite you to use the Music in a Lifetime website to connect your musical life at school with the world of possibilities that music opens up to you in life.

All you need is an inquiring mind, and

Be Inspired!

Music in a Lifetime is an online learning resource that uses:

-  YouTube videos of Wellington Wind Symphony performances and features.
-  Curated links to the best resources on the web.
-  A framework to foster independent exploration by students or a guided inquiry instructional approach.

Appassionato: The Wellington Winds Story, is the companion DVD for Music in a Lifetime. It is available for purchase, and for free distribution to schools in Ontario, while supplies last.

The Music

Explore works by Canadian and international composers, view sectional rehearsals, and learn about the instruments and their players.

Lifetime of Music

This is all about what it takes to keep music in your life beyond high school: the commitment, the community, and the rewards.

For Teachers

Music in a Lifetime is built on expectations from the Ontario curriculum. Explore lesson ideas that take a true inquiry stance.
